STEVE JACKSON RETIRES FROM SLCDA

After 18 ½ years of service at the airport, Steve Jackson has decided to retire on September 1.

In February of 1998 Steve was hired by Salt Lake City Department of Airports (SLCDA) as a maintenance management analyst. In 2002 he was selected to fill a vacant airport duty manager position (operations manager). In July 2003 he assumed duties as the SLCDA general aviation manager to manage SLCDA's two general aviation airports- South Valley Regional Airport in West Jordan, Tooele Valley Airport in Erda, and the east side of Salt Lake City International Airport.

Steve served in the United States Army for 31 years prior to joining the airport. He enlisted as a private in 1967 and ended his career as a Colonel. He is a Master Army Aviator who flew both helicopters and airplanes for the Army as he served in locations all over the world. He has nearly 8,000 military flying hours, of which more than 1,600 are combat flying hours (8,000 hours equals 1,000 eight hour duty days, which is the equivalent 33 months or 2.74 years sitting in the cockpit of an Army aircraft. This is time he considers well spent!

Steve loves aviation history and intends to help capture Utah aviation history as a volunteer with the Utah Historical Society as well as volunteering at the Veterans Administration Hospital, Employer Support of the Guard and Reserve, Commemorative Air Force, and the Utah chapter of the Vietnam Helicopter Pilot Association.

He is married to Shauna Sorenson and they are the parents of seven children and have 22 grandchildren.
